Continental Can Company Announces Scholarship Awards

The Hopewell, Virginia District of the Continental Wood-lands Division, Continental Can Company, Inc., has announced its scholarship program for 1965. Two scholarships for $1,000.00 per year for four years of study in the field of professional forestry will be awarded by the Hopewell Woodlands District this year. One scholarship will be awarded to a North Carolina student and one to a Virginia student. This is the twelfth consecutive year that the company has offered similar scholarships to outstanding graduating seniors in Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida and South Carolina. To be eligible for this scholarship, an applicant must be a resident of Virginia or North Carolina, in a county in which Continental Can has land ownership or procures pulpwood, or who is a resident of a city which is geographically located within may attend the School of Forestry the same counties.

The award winner this year try, North Carolina State at Raleigh, North Carolina or West Virginia University at Morgantown, West Virginia.

High school seniors who will graduate this spring and are interested in applying for this scholarship, should contact their principals or guidance counselors for application forms and other details.

Applications should be completed and received by the Hopewell District office no later than March 15, 1965. The 1965 winners will be announced after April 6, 1965.

Appomattox Heritage, Inc., directors have decided a regional multi-county Civil War Centennial observance next spring is not feasible. They also will seek to have the contents of Virginia Civil War Centennial Center brought to Appomattox permanently for housing and display.

The Center at Richmond is scheduled to close its doors next November 30, and be completely demobilized by December 31. It houses some $60,000 worth of permanent war-related exhibits.

Heritage Seeks Contents Of War Center

Appomattox Heritage, Inc., however, will continue as an organization to bring a permanent, drama to Appomattox and Appomattox Court House National Historical Park. Efforts for this ambitious expensive program are being stazed in cooperation with the National Park Service with openings by 1966 or 1967.

The substantial cost of a regional Centential observance next spring and the difficulties in coordinating an event involving four counties and one city, Lynchburg, were behind the decision to withdraw support for a regional commemoration. The corporation, however, agreed to provide plans and encouragement to Appomattox clubs should they agreed to sponsor an observance there next spring.

The resolution on the Richmond Centennial Center contends will be directed to Virginia leaders and commissions with responsibility for the valuable collection of display materials. The next move is part of Appomattox Heritage Corporation's efforts to focus greater attention on Appomattox and provide meaningful local effort to increase significance of the park in conjunction with the Park Service's valuable restoration there.

The board also approved a resolution requesting the Virginia Highway Department to construct Appomattox as a location for one of the rest stations and information centers it is now planning about the state.

Economist Forecasts Good Year

RICHMOND, Va. — A repeat of Virginia's steady economic advance in 1964 is anticipated for 1965 by Dr. R. Pierre Lumin, Consulting Economist for The Bank of Virginia.

Virginia contributed to and shared in the high prosperity which characterized the nation's economy through the first nine months of 1964.

The automobile industry, the production area most strongly affected by strike activity in the Fall of the year, pushed its December outpost to record levels to make up for lost time. The nation's retail sales also responded to the resumption of income payments in the automotive and other previously struck industries and set a new Christmas sale' record.

Dr. Lumpkin pointed out that nonagricultural employment in the final quarter of the year was approximately 3 per cent ahead of the similar period last year, this representing about the same gain in employment as was experienced in the preceding year.

According to estimates of total personal income received by Virginians in 1964, he said, it appears that the gain for the year will come to approximately 7 percent which will be above an estimated 6 percent gain for the United States as a whole.

Automobile sales in Virginia were hit in October and November by the strikes in the automotive industry, but it is estimated now that total automobile sales in 1964 will be as much as 10 percent above the 1963 level. Building permits issued by Virginia's 16 largest cities for the first 11 months of 1964 were 17 percent in value above permits issued in the similar months of 1963.

A survey of bsiness firms' intentions to spend for new plants and equipment, conducted by the Department of Commerce, indicates, that for the nation as a whole, such capital spending by business firms should continue upward in 1965 above the record rate established in 1964. These national developments should be reflected in the Virginia economy too.

Another factor on the national front, which also will affect the Virginia economy in 1965, is found in the availability and cost of credit, according to Dr. Lumpkin. Long - term interest rates are expected to reamin relatively stable throughout most of the new year and the high volume of savings being generated by our economy will assure a ready availability of funds for all qualified borrowers.

Officials Will Meet With Centennial Group

Lloyd M. Pierson, the new superintendent of the Appomattox Court House National Historical Park will meet with state and other officials Feb. 24, to discuss plans for the Centennial observance at the end of the Civil War, 1965.

Those attending the m will be Charles Marshall and regional director of the tional Park Service; Jos Geary, executive director Virginia Civil War Centen and William C. Hubbard county Centennial com chairman.

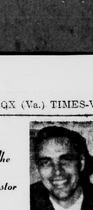
The Pastor Speaks



Rev. Thomas Waddill

One hundred years ago the Civil War was fast approaching its close. For four long years the men of Blue and Gray had fought for causes which they considered just and worth fighting for. Each side could propose many arguments to 'support its cause. Each side could sincerely invoke God's blessings upon its efforts.

It was not the cause supported by either side which determined the result of the war, but rather the relative size and strength of the two opposing armies. Some will contend that the fact that the North won the war proves their cause was the right one. This line of reasoning would suggest that might makes right and that the men who crucified Jesus were doing the just and proper thing. I shall leave to the historians the matter of deciding who was right and who was wrong. There are still arguments on both sides.

Appomattox can be justly proud that the surrender was signed here. For that surrender did not signify giving up. It often takes more courage to surrender than to continue to fight. Rather it signified the reunion of two parts of a great country. The result has been that there does not exist today two countries, fighting and squabbling between each other as did Israel and Judah, but one country, the most powerful, and in many respects the greatest country on earth.

As we approach the time for the commemoration of this peace we would do well to examine what we are commemorating. At a funeral one does not expect hilarity and jest. At a victory dinner one does not anticipate mournful speeches and long faces.

We pay tribute to the men of both sides who gave their all, who lived and fought and died for a cause they believed in. For them living was more than bread to eat and clothes to wear. It meant giving themselves to a cause which they considered just. We could well learn the lesson that to live victoriously does not necessarily mean to live to old age, but to give oneself to something outside oneself.

We rejoice that the conflict ended. The making of the peace did not occur overnight. Wounds were deep. Some have not yet healed. There are those in our nation today wh o continue to probe the old wounds, trying to prevent them from healing. As we commemorate the peace let us remember we are not attending the memorial service for a dead loved one. We are giving thanks to God that in His providence He had brought an end to conflict that pitted brother against brother, father against son, neighbor against neighbor. May we continue to build the PEACE in our own generation. In brotherly love let us truly have Peace through Union'.

Thomas A. Waddill, Pastor
Spout Spring Baptist Church

Tradition VS. Duty

Lesson for February 14, 1965

Which is more important, character or custom? This is not a rocking-chair question. It meets serious minded Christians more often than you might expect. Some of the time there's no problem. Eating with a fork and telling the truth can be both done at the same time. One is custom, one is character. Custom is what everybody does without thinking much about it. Character can't be seen with the naked eye as custom can. Customs are observed by people in droves and swarms. Doing what "everybody else" does calls for no special inner strength; being different from the crowd, refusing to conform, sometimes takes a hard head and a stout heart. The crowd is often right; but right or wrong, sometimes only a brave man can go against it. Character includes willingness to be different when "different" means right.

Breaking Custom

A custom-breaker is looked down on more th.n a lawbreaker. Indeed it is easier to break a law, and more popular too, than to break a custom. Look at any highway, some busy time of day. Half the people out there are driving faster than the law allows. Nobody writes in to complain about that. But if some driver decides to stick with the speed limit signs, the other drivers, all law-breakers, will honk at the man midnight. The highway public doesn't like law-observance when it interfers with their custom of breaking the speed laws. To take another example, in the old south there was no need of a law to keep white people and Negroes from eating together. But they always ate separately. Even if a man ran a restaurant, he would serve white and colored in different rooms though the stew may have been made in the same pot. When white people began to eat with Negores — even one white person with one Negro — the white person and the colored one no less would be looked on with ridicule if nothing worse. So all through life, from the small boy who would not be caught dead in some kind of clothes that none of the other fellow wear, down to the old man who requests a funeral just like everybody else's, "custom doth make cowards of us all."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN
Background Scripture: Matthew 14 and 15.
Devotional Reading: Matthew 5: 14-20.

Who Be Different?

There's no point in being different just for the fun of it. There should be some reason for it. The Bible helps us here. The Hebrews were God's own people, and the prophets drummed it into the m— or tried to — that if they were really the people of God they would have to act and think and worship and work and play differently from their heathen neighbors. The New Testament tells how Jesus was rebuked for eating with "untouchables" and because his friends did not always observe all the ancient traditions. All down the ages it has been the same story. The early Christians seemed like cranks to the Romans because they would not burn a pinch of incense on a little altar. Every body else did it; fifty million Romans couldn't be wrong; what ails these peevish people?

Our Current Crisis

One problem that is rocking America as these lines are being written, is the race question. It is a painful problem, and especially for the Christian. Are you, reading these lines, a white person? Then take time this week to ask yourself, what is the way God wants me to treat them if he were here? Or are you, reading this column, a Negro? Then give some thought to the question: Is what I think about white people, the way a Christian should think about them? Do I dare go out and put my Christian love to work in my relations with white people? White man and Negro, if we are honest with ourselves we have to admit that when custom conflicts with conscience or with Christian character, it's hard to do the very thing we know is right. But is it Christlike to be "sons and daughters of the Most High" only when it is easy?
